 - b. The form of the preliminary draft is acceptable.
- 3. Initial discussion of the wording of the preliminary draft was undertaken on a point by point basis with the following results:
 - a. Statement of the "problem"

Army (Mr. Gordon) suggested that the statement should be changed to: "What action should be taken to insure the satisfaction of intelligence consumer needs?" The change was agreed to by the committee.

CIA suggested that the statement that "reference tools were adequate" should be clarified to show that only dictionaries, encyclopedias, and similar reference tools were meant.

4. At this point the committee egreed that it would be more profitable to discuss the statements and ideas presented by the report rather than just emendation of the wording, since it appeared probable that a general rewrite would become necessary.

There was discussion on the use of the term "duplication" in the seport. Air representatives pointed out that TI work was solely for the entisfaction of Air requirements and that there actually was no duplication between TI and FDD.

Air Force (Mr. Pugh) stated that the reference to duplication between Treasure Island and FDD should be clarified by expansion to show a more detailed description of the two facilities including the character of the services performed and the character of the processing. Thus, no duplication might be shown to exist.

The Chairman suggested that as 17 titles of the Soviet press were now exploited by both facilities for information in the same subject sategories, it appeared that it was prime facile duplication of effort.

Air representatives pointed out that the exploitation effort of treasure Island was in a state of flux at the moment and might result in the cossation of effort on the Soviet press.

State (Mr. Lacey) stated that insameth as Air Force had about 50% of the available linguists for exploitation of Russian publications, this fact should be weighed in favor of the other consumers in imposing demands on MD.

Army (Sir. Georgevitch) stated that the analysts of his service were faced with far too great a volume of abstracts covering unrelated bits and pieces of information from foreign documents to allow proper time for the preparation of finished intelligence. He added that some central facility should collate this information for the consumers and FDD was the logical unit to perform this service.

State (Mr. Lacey) suggested that the committee report should not be confined to existing facilities but should clearly show the true needs of the intelligence community. This would undoubtedly demonstrate that existing facilities were not adequate to meet these needs.

requested that the terms used by the committee, such as "abstract," "extract," "collation," etc. be clearly defined.
